Historic Hardin, Montana

Hardin was named for Samuel H. Hardin, a cattleman from near Ranchester, Wyoming, and a friend of Lincoln Land Company's president, Mr. Morrell. Early merchants set up tents and within a short time, the permanent business buildings were springing up from the sagebrush flat that has been chosen to be the foundation of this new town. By 1922 the business district was well established, much the same as it is found today.

With the formation of Big Horn County on January 3, 1913, Hardin became the county seat of government and trading center for the ranchers and homesteaders who had settled the land and the Crow Indian people who were now neighbors.

Today you will see irrigated farming on the Big Horn and Little Big Horn river bottoms, Dry Land farming on the higher bench lands where large fields of wheat and other grain crops are grown.

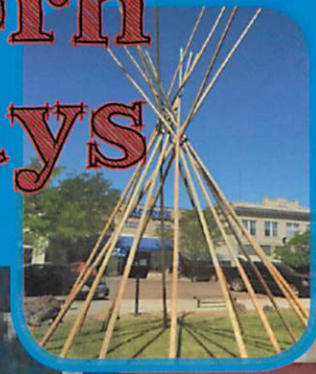

Thousands of head of cattle graze the grass hill lands, as did in the late 1880's. Bands of sheep were once common, but have shrunk to small farm flocks of today.

Hardin is located near the world famous Big Horn River known for it's trout fishing.

The famous Battle of the Little Big Horn was fought near Hardin in 1876, where Lt. Col. George Armstrong Custer and his troops were defeated. The Reenactment of Custer's Last Stand is portrayed each summer during the last week of June in the Hardin area.
